Paylocity and Qqest Announce TimeForce Time and Labor Solutions

Elk Grove Village, Illinois – June 8, 2006 – Paylocity Corporation and Qqest Software Systems announce an alliance to complement both organizations' core competencies, while expanding their overall service offerings in the Midwest marketplace. As the leading independent payroll service in America, Paylocity will begin offering select Qqest time and attendance services to its customers and prospects.

Called Paylocity TimeForce, this online, workforce management solution will be powered by Qqest and sold as an additional Paylocity service. TimeForce will help companies to better manage their most important resource – their employees, while improving their ability to collect, process and manage time. The TimeForce system automates many manual processes, enhances reporting, and improves scheduling, so organizations can improve employee productivity and data accuracy, while reducing hidden costs and enhancing their decision-making abilities.

"This alliance serves the business community by offering a comprehensive suite of payroll and workforce management services," states Steve Sarowitz, Paylocity President and Founder. "Payroll services usually do not concentrate on time clock hardware and its correlating software to the level that Qqest Software specializes in these areas."

"While Qqest specializes in time and labor management systems," says Robert Hansen, Sales Director of Strategic Alliances for Qqest, "we do not have the same level of customized payroll capabilities that Paylocity offers to its clients. Our Paylocity alliance strengthens our time and attendance presence in the Midwest, without our having to perform ongoing payroll-related tasks or develop data integration capabilities with other employer services organizations such as 401(k) providers or banking institutions."

Both entities will continue to operate independently of each other to best serve their customers' needs.
